Becoming the Dwelling Place of God

Luke 1:39-45; Hebrews 10:5-10

Looking for a place to live is a hard and moving is at the top of the stress charts. Some people start looking for somewhere to live, look at possibilities, but can't quite make a decision. Perhaps they are too wedded to the old place. The familiar is comfortable; maybe the new places are too expensive. And how do we know what the neighbours will be like? Nothing is perfect...

So how does a perfect God choose a dwelling place? In our gospel passage today, God has already chosen to dwell in a unique way in Mary, a young teenager from a hick town. This was not a whim, a sudden decision. Hebrews 10:5 reminds us that thousands of years before Christ was born, even before the world itself was formed from nothing, Father God was planning and preparing a body for Jesus. He prepared Mary to receive Jesus in her womb and then he prepared Jesus to come and live amongst us in a normal human body. In this way, we could relate to him and he could experience what we experience and flesh out his plan of salvation for us.

In just the same way, Paul writes in Ephesians 1 that God chose us before the foundation of the earth. He planned good things for us to do and all we have to do is say as in Hebrews 10:7, "Here I am, I have come to do your will O God." Mary's excellent response to God was, "I am the Lord's servant. May it be to me as you have said."

Isn't it comforting to reflect that the situation we find ourselves in is not a surprise to God and that he has a plan for us? Let's keep our hearts open to how God will direct us towards his will.

Mary was directed by an angel to go to see her relative Elizabeth. This shows the kindness of God, putting young Mary in a safe place where she could get over the morning sickness, learn about pregnancy and birth and be supported by a close relative. Wasn't God wise and kind to send Mary to someone who also had a miraculous pregnancy, who would understand and believe her?

Mary would also have come under the protection of Zechariah. People were already probably in awe of Zechariah – he was a not only a priest, but one whom God had specially marked for something tremendously important. His protection would make sure she was not stoned for conceiving out of wedlock.

Elizabeth, greeting her, said in essence: "Awesome! You lucky, lucky thing! Everyone will be so envious of you! You will be SO happy because you put your whole trust in what our faithful God has said."

Two women, two different ways of being indwelt by God. How does their experience relate to us?

In the Alpha course which is running at present we have been learning about the Holy Spirit. About who He is: the Spirit of God, the expression of the being of God here in this world.

Sometimes we wonder why people we love don't receive Christ. We can pray for them according to Ephesians 3:16-17 "I pray that out of his glorious riches he may strengthen you with power through his Spirit in your inner being, so that Christ may dwell in your hearts through faith."

This is not hard for him! Out of his glorious riches he can supply all we need, so that Christ may dwell in our hearts. It looks as if this may be a key. We can all pray to be strengthened with power through the Holy Spirit in our inmost being. Then Christ can dwell in our hearts through faith. Faith is the confident expectation that he will do what he says he will do.

So much for individual indwelling. Ephesians 2:22 speaks of the way in which Christ dwells corporately in us as a church. "And in him, you too are being built together to become a dwelling in which God lives by his Spirit."

It's as we do life together that God builds us together. As a church, together we will display God's character and love and power. We purposefully meet together, coming to church regularly even when we don't feel like it, we talk and pray with one another at home group, attend events like the summer adventure camp, and in all these things our lives are intertwined with each other's. God is building us into His dwelling place. This is a corporate thing.

As in the natural, so in the spiritual:

It is only together with other Christians that we can grasp the width and durability and dizzy heights and plumb the depths of Christ's love. I noticed from the beginning of my walk with God that worship in a group is not just different in quantity, but also in quality. In the context of the body of Christ, we begin to experience His love and to be filled up with the fullness of God.

Have you noticed at Christmas time that you can stretch your stomach to hold more delicious food? Similarly, our capacity to receive the love and presence of Christ can increase. God makes it happen as we long for and reach out to him, particularly together with other Christians.

What made Mary so lucky, so blessed, so fortunate and to be envied? How could I ever be so lucky as to be chosen by God for an awesome task? Should I pray and fast and memorise scripture and try to be really holy? Too hard. Best just to look for what God has already planned for me.

If we glance over to the verses after today's gospel reading (p993) in Mary's song of greeting to Elizabeth, she never boasted of how virtuous she was. She boasted in God and how wonderful He is. It was an amazingly risky thing God did, to entrust Himself to a young, inexperienced peasant girl. But

1 Corinthians 1:25-29 ... the foolishness of God is wiser than man's wisdom, and the weakness of God is stronger than man's strength. Brothers, think of what you were when you were called. Not many of you were wise by human standards; not many were influential; not many were of noble birth. But God chose the foolish things of the world to shame the wise; God chose the weak things of the world to shame the strong. He chose the lowly things of this world and the despised things--and the things that are not--to nullify the things that are, so that no-one may boast before him.

If we look at the greeting Mary gave to Elizabeth from v46 on, we become sure that Mary was not chosen because she was perfect. She says "My spirit rejoices in God my saviour." If she had been perfect, she would have had no need of a saviour. So we can see how Mary can be an example to us, a role model. Her attitude is something we can all take on.

If you ask him to, God will come and dwell in you by His spirit. You might think, "How could I be so lucky – the God who is pure, holy and full of truth and life, dwelling in me?" That is an everyday miracle that you and I can participate in. And the blessing comes to those who believe. See in v45 – "Blessed is the one who has believed that what the Lord has said will be accomplished!"

If you allow yourself to relax into believing that he will do what he promises to do, it will happen. “Behold, I stand at the door and knock,” Jesus says. “Just open your heart. Let me in.” We open the door, but Jesus does everything else – “Lest anyone should boast.”

This is the last Sunday of Advent and on Tuesday we will be into the Christmas season, when it is right and proper for us to make room in our hearts. Don’t wait for Christmas, or even for New Year’s resolutions - let’s prepare ourselves now to be the dwelling place of God? Jesus said, “Behold, I stand at the door and knock. If anyone hear my voice and open the door, I will come into him and dine with him and he with me.”

How can Jesus dwell in an already full life? De-cluttering might come first - realize that each step towards God will be a process of saying yes to “making space for God” and saying no to “those things that crowd God out.”

Making space for God to dwell might be as simple as regularly getting up ten minutes earlier and opening the window, pausing for a few moments and opening our ears to listen. How might God speak to you?

As you hear the sound of the birds, He might say, “I know when a single sparrow falls to the ground, but you are worth much more to me than these.” He might draw your attention to a marching line of ants and say, “They get a lot done, but they never pause to attend to me. I like it when you attend to me.” Or perhaps a deliberate silent pause before attending to the pile of papers on your desk. This would signal to God that He comes before and into everything in your life.

As I thought about preparing for the in-dwelling of God, I remembered clearing out the under-stair cupboard. Out went a broken vacuum cleaner. Out went a picnic mat I had two of. Out came the fans we use in the hot weather. Now I had a useable cupboard space, not a junk heap.

The song he reminded me of was “I want to be your number one.” Out go all the things that are second best! Out go all the things we have kept but no longer need: the grudges, the anger, the need to punish someone, the obsession with things.

I can imagine Jesus looking at this crowd of people. In amongst the big crowd are you and me. Some of them not necessarily high-born or super-intelligent. Some recognise their own need. Jesus pushes his way through the crowd, almost like a homing pigeon, like a heat-sensing missile, sure of his target, drawn by the longing he senses in you. He pushes past people who don’t think they need God’s grace or a saviour. He pushes past those who think they are as good as the next bloke - and perhaps a little better.

Then at last he finds you – your hands are empty and you know it. You are just waiting there, eyes scanning the crowd for Him, knowing the good things you have done are like dust on the scales, weighed against God’s goodness, but hoping against hope that the Lord will choose you. And he stretches out his arms wide to you and says “Here’s where I want to be. Here’s where I feel at home. With you and in you.”

Today is the day to reach out to him and to let go of the things that keep the space inside you too cramped for God to dwell in.

God bless you as you do.
